Dear Charles,

It is abundantly clear that the educational experiences that are imposed on most children around the world are not fully or effectively serving their needs, the needs of their communities, or the needs of the wider world.

The importance of addressing this issue cannot be underestimated and I am delighted that the Center for Curriculum Redesign is beginning to tackle the problem from the grassroots. This is a subject that I am fully committed to and sincerely hope that we will be able to find ways of collaborating in the near future.

With Kind Regards,

Ross Hall
